The DCACA's animal shelter is a collaborative effort among Allen Park, Lincoln Park, Southgate, and Wyandotte. Services provided include stray and surrender intake, requested euthanasia, stray reclaim, limited adoptions and microchipping while supplies last.

Wyandotte's animal shelter serves as the main adoption center. The Southgate facility serves as the intake facility and holds animals until space is made available at Wyandotte's adoption center. Often the majority of animals at the intake facility are available for adoption, but the adoption facility is full and they cannot be transferred until space becomes available. Therefore, be sure to look on the DCACA's Adopt-A-Pet page for a listing of the animals that are available for adoption. You may also visit the animal that you are interested in adopting at the Southgate facility during office hours.
